HARRISBURO, March 20.—The Pennsylvania Senate is a very able one, and has until within a few days seemed disposed to be honest. The terms of service of many Senators expire advanced to higher positions, and are much more careful in their actions than the members of the House. Since Senator Buckalew's retire-ment there's no one to dispute the leadership of the Democratic side of the House with Sena-tor Wm. A. Wallace. Alexander McClure, elected as an anti-Republican, has no entangling alear a conservative middle ground that has extorted praises even from Cameron's sturdiest henchmen. of their employers. The railroad is oftentimes tery liberal in its contributions toward the dection expenses of certain members, and these men are not loth to pay back on the floor in wites and influence what they received when on the stump.

If ever a body was under the influence of corporations it is this Pennsylvania Legislature. It is owned body and soul by these people. They say what shall and what shall not press. Their agents have free access to the floors of both franches, and they come and go as if they were the purchased and not the purchasers. Some at the best members of both flouses have seen this with mortification, but they dare not say a word about it lest the members owned by these men take revenge by killing every bill which interests their constituents. Senator Wm. A. Waliace, however, a few days ago saw that that huge corooration, the Pennsylvania Raliroad, was crippling the lumber men of his district by making laws oppressive and uncalled for. He honestly expressed his indignation, stating that he fully understood the weighty arguments of these great corporations, and that reason and justice had little chance when pitted against such convincing proofs.

Other legislators feel as Mr. Wallace does, but tew have the boldness of the distinguished Senator from Clearfield.

THE MEN WHO MAKE THE BARGAINS.

These lobbyists are the first men here and the last ones to leave? Sam Moon and Daddy Burns of the Pennsylvania Central, Foy of the Reading road, and Pete Herdie of anything that turns up and promises to pay, not only go back and forth with perfect freedom in the Senate and House but receive the marked civilities of nine-tenths of the members. If there is a bill up in which their employers are interested, they flit from member to member "axing things" with all the agility of page boys. Hat and cont racks inside of the bars of the chamber are placed at their disposal, and the Legislative box of to-barso is as free to them as to the members who hake the people pay for it by the subterfuge of voting money to keep the State archives. This is no fancy picture. Even Comress makes a show of excluding members of the third house from the floors. Here they are the most welcome guests. The Pennsylvania Legislature would be a nonentity without the keen face and nervous form of Moon and the old and burly Paddy hurss. Daddy has been here about ninety-nine years, but he has as keen an eye, as sharp an ear, and as soft a heart as he had when he compact of the Pennsylvania Raifroad forces, and Burns and as as fast and justant. They are a very strong team.

Going for the Epolis. THE MEN WHO MAKE THE BARGAINS.

Strong team.

The Legislature does a great deal of work for the Fennsylvania Railroad, and report says the members get poor pay for doing it. The rate to be paid this year has not been definitely fixed on, but the Roosters, especially those from Philadelphia, are hoping the compensation will be more liberal than last year. After the session of 1872 was over, the boys were told to go to the Pennsylvania office and have their session of 1872 was over, the boys were told to go to the Pennsylvania office and have their session asses extended to the end of the year. Thoy did so, and each found in addition to the piece of pasteboard a couple of one hundred dollar bills. This was the munificent renuncration of the great Pennsylvania Railroad to those who had for three months perjured their souls, erawled in the dust on their bellies, and done the dirty work of that corporation. It cost more than that to bay one Jerseyman in Trenton. The majority of the members of this Legislature, it is said, got this year $100 apiece to pass a supilionent to the charter of the Union Railway Company of Philadelphia.

The competition for bribes has become so brisk during the past five years that the prices are fearfully low—so low, indeed, that the contempt of the briber is only equalled by the avoidity with which the members sell their bonor. A trip pass for a constituent goes sometimes further than a $500 in an envelope at the end of the session.

FEAR OF LOSING THEIR PLACHES. GOING FOR THE SPOILS.

PEAR OF LOSING THEIR PLACERS

It was expected that the members would this year insist on larger bones, as the new Constitution, if adopted, would henceforth take from the Legislature the class of bills out of which corruption flows most freely. But from all I can learn they are to be had as cheap as ever. The old stereotyped sentence, "There is no change in the price of cattle since our last report," might very well and truthfully be made to read, "There is no change in the price of a Pennsylvania legislator." Whether it sintended to defeat the Constitution by those who rule the Legislature, or whether it arises from timidity on the part of nembers, or whether the competition for "boues" is even more lively than usual, I cannot say. Probably all three causes influence the market and make it much cheaper for those who want to buy.

changed and then adopted by the people has made the corporations and the politicians come here and bolidly ask this session for all they desire. As usual, the Pennsylvania Railroad was the first in the market aviking for an increase of capital stock which they modestly requested they be allowed to fix at any figure they thought proper. This was granted by the Legislature, but the Governor privately said he would not consent: so the bill was recalled, and the company were allowed to double their capital—that is, made it $180,000,000. This Gov. Hartunft agreed to, and it became a law. Then the rail-ro ds, camal and express companies combiged and asked for the repeal of the tax on gross receipts. This, too, was acceded to, and the State will receive $1.000,000 a year less revenue than it has been collecting. Then the Pennsylvania and Reading road must get pessession of the whole Delaware river front of Philadelphia to them.

The politicians and placeholders, especially those from Philadelphia, have been not a whit more modest. First and foremost we had Stafe Treesurer Mackey jumping into the breash rale ing to be retained until his successor is elected next tall. Its should ge out this spring, but he, it is should ge out this spring, but he, it is should ge out this spring, but he, it is should be the present his spring put he, it is not to the Registry law, so they could use the present his mest fall to either adopt or kill the new Constitution, just as it suits their private interests. They have so far hold the bill in the Senate, and If it suits their private interests. They have so far hold the bill in the Senate, and If it suits their private interests. They have so far hold the suits and they suit the suits and they do not suit the suits. Act to case a sea of the probably go through. There was no better time, also, to requite the services of such hermaphrodite Democratic politicians like Vin. V. McGrath for selling out their party of the private suits of the suits of the private suits of the suits of the private suits of the suits of th

They represent the State Treasurer's office in the person of Mackey, the Federal Revenue office in the person of Russell Errett, who, by the way, holds, in direct violation of President Grant's order, a rederal assessorship in Plitsburgh and the clerkship of the State Senate), the Executive department in the person of M. S. Quay, Secretary of the Commonwealth; the Philadelphia placeholders in the persons of District Attorney Mann, Sheriff Leeds, Receiver of Taxes John L. Hill: and the political soldiers of fortune—the Thenadiers—in the person of Wm. H. Kemble. These men control the House. Their ready tools, such as Lamon, Handy Smith, Ash, McCullough, Sam Josephs elected as a Democrath have the direction of legislation. Lamon and Smith are ex-detectives, and it is not a very old tradition which states that the noted thief Dutch Aherns told both of them, in sight of the Mayor's office, that they sported their fine clothes and their diamonds and handsome pictures through the generosity of the men whom it was their duty to consign to prison. McCullough is Mayor Stokely's ex-clerk, who has fixed up for himself the position of committing magistrate at the Central station in Philadelphia. He was terribly frightened at an amendment offered to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to be appointed to his bill requiring the person to have the repeater is pardoned by President Grant, and the District Attorney is dismissed t

Jesse Underwood, the outlaw, March 20.

Jesse Underwood, the outlaw, who murdered homas Trumbo some years ago, and for whom the Governor has offered a large reward, was known to be in his old neighborhood last week on a visit to his wife. Two young men of Carter county named Tyree, with another named Savage, resolved they would capture him. Arming themselves with shot guns and navy revolvers, they went to the vicinity of the place where Underwood was supposed to be lurking, and for several days amused themselves apparently with the innocent enjoyment of hunting small game, but intent on the purpose of bagging game of another character.

Old George Underwood, the father of the outlaw, and another son named David, hearing these young men were in the neighborhood, and suspecting their purpose, determined to drive them off. Taking their rifles they went in pursuit of the young men, and coming up with the Tyrees, immediately began firing. One of the young men was shot and slightly wounded in the wrist, but they bravely returned the fire, and shot two balls in the leg of old George Underwood above the knee, shivering the bone into small fragments. Dr. Steels, who attended him, thinks he cannot live. David Underwood received a slight flesh wound.

The young Tyrees, after the fight was over, went to Grayson, the county seat of Carter, and surrendered themselves to the authorities. After a trial, which lasted two or more days, they were acquitted.

Jesse Underwood escaped to Ohio; but we understand parties are in pursuit and determined to take him dead or alive. Old George Underwood, who was so severely wounded in this remontre, is the father of the desperating out of all the villainy which has been perpetrated in that part of the State by bis sons.

NASHVILLE, March, 1873.—I left Memphis t night, but a man in the service of THE SUN is never in the dark. I passed through Jack-son. Next to Memphis, it's the biggest town in Western Tennessee. Its main distinguishing feature is its Jackson. The first time I ever was in Jackson was a good many years ago. I wasn't as good then as I am now, and I rode there on a horse from Lexington to see a man hanged. Lexington has a tin Court House with a cupola. It's twenty-three miles from the Tenness It's twenty-thrice miles from the Tennesses river and sixteen from Jack's creek, and it's made out of folks and citizens. That ride was hard on the borse, and it was hard on me, too, I didn't feel like dancing for some days after it. I wore a pair of green leggings, and one side of my saddle bags was filled with pones of corn bread and the other side with bacon. That bacon was cured before I was cured of that ride. Saddle bags are used on horseback instead of trunks. Trunks don't hitch onto horses worth a cent. They hitch to elephants better.

SOMETHING OF A STORM.

I' is twenty-eight miles from Lexington to Jackson. They had a man shut up in prison in Jackson. His name was kiley. He got rily one day and killed a man, and as they had no other use for him they concluded to hang him, and I concluded to go and see how they did it, and honce that ride. They took him in a wagon to the outskirts of the town; he had an outskirt too; and just as they were about bitching him by the throat to the limb of a tree, there came up a tornado that twisted off the top of that tree as if it had been a pipe stem. Jimmuny Crix, didn't I cut sticks? Every tree in that forest seemed to be possessed with an irrepressible desire to lie down on somebody, and everybody left. The minister, who only the Sunday previous toich his congregation "how ready and willing he was to die," beat the whole crowd and came out ahead. The storm lasted half an hour, and blew down lots of trees, but I didn't stay to count 'em. Your worthy correspondent was seared, and he slid. They took Mr. Riley back after the storm was over and hung him, but John didn't see them do it. It was a regular hurricane that prevented him from seeing the finale, and he hurried his cane some, you bet. A great many people in Western Tennessee will remember that terrible June 6. I rode twenty-eight miles back, aif for nothing: twice twenty-eight are fifty-six, that's mathematics; and it reminks me of a chap out here who thinks he is some,

THE HEAD OF NAVIGATION. Nashville is a splendid city. It is a port of entry, too, and the capital of Davidson county and the State of Tennesce all at once. It's on the Cumberland river. It ain't exactly on it, but on the side of it, 120 miles up stream from its mouth and the Ohio river. It's at the head of steamboat navigation. This head has never been shampood since the barbarian races left. I saw one steamboat there that there never will be any head of navigation to, not as long as pint mugs hold out. It's so small that the capital takes it home rainy nights under his arm. Nashville is built on a biuff of sandstone. It was laid out in the latter part of the last century, and by the latter part of next century will be laid out, too. It was originally laid out on a plot of 20 acres. This plot is bigger now—bigger than Guy Fawkes's plot. Coffee was settled with codfish skins. Cuffee was settled by Abe Lincoln. Bills are settled with spondulix, and Nashville was settled by people and women.

The first thing the stranger sees on approaching the city, if it isn't dark, is the irst thing he looks at and that is the State House. It is built on an eminence, and neople of eminence go there. It is a splendid building, and stands high in the estimation of the citizens—away up high. No town in the great valley of the West enjoys better health. It possesses a temperate climate. Ned Buntline used to live here, and he has become temperate, two.

About fourteen miles northeast from the city is the Hermitage, the homestead of Jackson. Here he passed his last days, and died June 8, 1845, aged 79, an illustrious statesman and a warrior.

In some parts of Tennessee they swearin a pot of hot water, add a handful of sait, and can it cussed good soup. I don't like it; it's too thin. The folks who put up the State House built a castle in the air.

There is a man lives in Nashvilie who wrote a story. The hero was a scout worse than ten Buffalo Williams. One day he sat down in a keg of lard; then slid down the Rocky Mountains with a cannon in his mouth, right in among ten thousand Indians. That scout was chuck full of whiskey, and the Indians took him for the great spirit and all ted, and that scout took their horses to Chicago and Omaha and sold 'em, and got rich and married the author's daughter, who ewhed a first mortgage on $13 worth of red hair that adorned her head, and now they live in affluence and a house too. A FIGHTING DAY IN TRENTON.

Gue Canfield Openion the Bull in the Hone -McPherson goes Gunning after the Pres In the Senate-The House Committee of the Free Railroad Bill.

TRENTON, March 26,-This has been fighting day in the House. With the exception of Brother Dorrell, Brother Smith, Brother Barnes, and a few others, every man has been shaking up his muscle for the past ten hours And the Senate has not been much better. The grave and reverend seigneurs who compose that honorable body are but seldem moved from the proprieties of the occasion. There are too many eld soldiers there for that. Sowell, the man who captured twenty-seven battle flags in one glorious day down near Fredericksburg, is not the boy to be frightened in his place by the swivel guns of a persistent lobby. Always as calm, cool, and imperturbable as the man of Marengo, whom he so much resembles, he will not fly until some new Waterloo gathers him and his party in its vast shadow, and I much doubt whether even then he will run.

WHY GUS CANFIELD WAS PULL OF FIGHT. But they all, with few exceptions, shook their muscle up this morning previous to taking the usual ante-pranchal cocktail. Gus Canfield came down to the House full of fight, having discovered that a few days ago somebody had been here while Stonewall Jackson was away, and had gone and had passed a little bill allowing one of the State officers to purchase all the old law and equity reports left on the shelves of impecu-nious bibliopoles at the vile sum of $5 a volume. Aiready $3,500 had been spent in this noble pur-pose, and before the weet; was out $25,000 odd of the State's money would have gone away in the twilight with Monsieur Monte Christo. But Gus had his little 'pealer put through in an hour and a half, and so carned the gratitude of those who call themselves Jerseymen and taxpavers by stopping a mean little drain upon a more than exhausted treasury. gone and had passed a little bill allowing one of Over in the Senate, the worthy centleman who seems to have been selected as the target for the small scorn of all the newspapers except The Sun arose to a question of privilege, and proceeded to except to the treatment made of his speech yesterday by one of your contemporaries. The Sun arose to a question of privilege, and proceeded to except to the treatment made of his speech yesterday by one of your contemporaries. The Sun makes no mistakes of this kind. It sends just what a man says, and then holds him to his record faithfully and fearlessly. It will never misrepresent the Senator from Hudson. Fame is too dear, reputation too valuable, even to those who have lago as their quondam friend, to do anything of this kind.

Senator Sewell, also, rose and called attention to a statement made in a Trenton paper that the engrossed copy of bil No. 8, free railroads, had been taken out of the State for examination by interested parties, and moved the appointment of a committee to send for the usual "persons and papers." But it is too late in the session to effect anything in this line, and the resolution will in all probability amount to nothing.

HUDSON COUNTY ON ITS NERVE.

Then in the House Hudson county cot upon its nerve and went for and against what is called the Boulevard bill, giving immense power to a commission as to the opening, laying out, changing, grading, making, and everything else of avenues in Jersey City. Peter Henderson is perhaps the best known name in the bill, and if they all are as honest, sensible, and competent as he is, they may make a good thing for Jersey City. THE WORK OF WORTHINCTON'S COMMITTEE.

Some injustice was done to the committee appointed by the House on bill No. 8 in my Sen of yesterday. It seems that Worthington and his committee have been in session all of two whole nights on this great subject. Yesterday morning the cocks of Trenton had long ceased to crow for daylight when Worthington and his friends sought their couches, and this morning Jersey farmers were taking their coffee and sausages when the same parties sought to steal an hour of nature's sweet restorer. At noon to-day Worthington sent up his report on the Sonate amendment to House bill No. 8. The amendment, it may be as well to say, consists in the simple and wholesale substitution of the Senate bill after the cancting clause of the House. On this bill as amended the committee has been laboring for two nights with a persistent fidelity rare anywhere and unexampted in the history of New Jersey. As the bill came from the Senate, as before intimated in this correspondence, it was comparatively worthless—a tub thrown to the popular whale for the popular whale is amusement. Under the bill a railroad might indeed be built if a man could get the money, but unfortunately he couldn't get the money even on a post obit. Worthington had the amendments printed at his own expense and laid upon the derks of members, himself taking care to see that the press had copies.

No. 32.—No franchise heretofore granted to construct a railroad, or to build or establish ferries or bridges, or to operate any line of travel and take tolk theretor, shall hereafter continue to be or be construed to remain exclusive unless in such grant heretofore made or hereafter to be made it be so expressly provided.

Pertinent to this clause is the "reason" given by the competition.

THE AMENDMENTS AGREED TO.

THE SADDLE RIVER RAILROAD BILL.

The Senate passed the supplement to the Sadde River Railroad bill, which revives an act of last year. It was then sent to the House, and the House passed it and sent it to the committee to take it to the Governor. At this point the Senate reconsidered its vote, and sent a message to the House requestings return of the bill. In the mean time the Governor's private secretary having got the bill, a resolution was introduced requesting the Governor to return it to the House. This was debated, and it was said that the Midland road'and other monopolists wanted to kill the bill, and had induced its reconsideration in the Senate because the people of Bergen wanted it. The House refused to request the Governor to return the bill by a vote of 16 to 38. MUNICIPAL TAX ON BAILROADS.

A bill was introduced requiring railroad companies, in addition to the tax of the half of one per cent, on the cost of the bed of their roads and buildings and grounds for depots, to pay a municipal tax of one per cent, upon a valuation to be made by a State Commissionier of Hailroad Taxation, to be appointed; ten acres at the terminals, with the buildings, to be free from municipal tax.

The bill to provide Summary Jurisdiction Courts in Jersey City was passed in the Senate. Also, the supplement to the Jersey City and Bergen Point Railroad; the supplement to the Jersey City fire Department; and to authorize the Morris and Essex Railroad to build a spur to the city of Paterson.

DO MR JUSTICE.

I feel that my mission here is ended. The Tombs must come down! If they send me to an asylum I will start the ball a rolling, and that institution will fell, also. Oh, how the authorities would like to murder me, but they cannot do it. I have them in my grasp. Only yesterday something was given me in my food which made me deathly sick. I do not doubt but that the food was poisoned. Stokes came to me as I was fainting, and shortly afterward we bursted the little window at the rear of the cell) and the fresh air revived me. I do not think the officials of this prison would do me harm, and therefore exonerate them. Good Mrs. Eleanor Fletcher Bishop was here just before you came in. She is going to get a body of competent physicians to examine into my sanity. Dr. Neolis, the prison physician, will tell you that I am not insane. So will many others who are equally competent to judge me as Dr. Hammond or Dr. Cross. But let the authorities go on with their work if they will. I can stand it. Hammond signed his DEATH WARRANT when he certified to my insmity, and he knows it."

Mr. Train grew eloquent as he spoke of the new outrage which he thinks the authorities intend to impose upon hite, and assured the reporter that he would ablie by the decision of the people. He extended his hand to the reporter, whom he bade a hearty good bye, drew back the heavy iron door, and shut himself out from the gaze of the curious.

When the reporter, a few moments later, met the warden in the office, that official asked, "Well, what does he say? What is he going to do about it?" The reporter replied, "Nothing." The Warden stroked his beard and smiled. Then he chuckled to himself and sat in his comfortable arm chair. Pointing to a document on his desk he said. "That is a writ of habeds corpus commanding me to produce Mr. Train's body in court to-morrow." Then the Warden chuckled again and added, "So he goes out to-morrow." The reporter next called upon Gen. L. S. Chatfield, who was in his office talking to a lady and gentleman who seemed very anxious about Mr. Train's fate. The General, an elderly gentleman of admirable address, said that he went before Justice Fancher in the morning and procured writs of habeas corpus and certiorari so as to have Mr. Train taken into court and the indictment examined.

"To tell the truth," added the General, "the examined.

"To tell the truth," added the General, "the "To tell the truth," added the General, "the indictment is NOT WORTH A STRAW, and Mr. Train has been unjustly detained in prison. The authorities are afraid of him, as he is—what you style him in The Sux—an elephant on their hands. Train is no more lineane than I am, and I have yet to hear of any one calling me insane."

on their hands. Train is no more insane than I am, and I have yet to hear of any one calling me insane."

The lady here interrupted the General by saying, "Mr. Train knows that we are all friendly toward him, and appreciates our kindness; but he wants us to do nothing, saying it is the duty of the authorities to set him right."

The venerable gentleman accompanying the lady said that he thought Mr. Train was very foolish not to allow his friends to intercede for him. "Oh." said the General, "but I have had the writs served, and Train must be taken into court to-morrow."

The venerable gentleman smiled. "Warden Johnson told me." said he, "that he had tried every means to persuade Mr. Train to step out of his cell, but that George invariably declined. You know Train can go on his own recognizance. Well, when Mrs. Train visited the Tombs to see her husband, the Warden said to George, 'Why don't you go home with your wife? You know you can leave here. Go with her.' George wouldn't stir.

WALDEN JOHNSON'S ONLY FEAR.

"Then again, the Warden has repeatedly asked George to go down into the office and amuse himself or walk in the yard. But George stuck, and there he sticks. (Here the venerable gentleman lowered his voice). The Warden told me quietly that if he could only get George out of his cell he would shut the door, and not permit him to reënter, and that if George stepped out into the open air outside the prison walls, the Tombs doors would be barred against him." Here the speaker laughed heartily, and added, "How he sticks, how he sticks, God knows what a time we may have to-morrow in drauging him out of his cell!"

Gen. Chatfield said that the indictment does not set forth what matter was obscene in the suppressed Train Lique, and therefore must fall. "You might as well draw up an indictment," said be, "against a man for murder, and not mention who the murdered person was. If they send Train to Ward's Island, the authorities will discover that he has them in a very big box,"

The General, in bidding the reporter good-bye.

The General, in bidding the reporter good-bye, said that at last something would be done in the said that at last something stems are asset. Mrs Eleanor Fletcher Bishop procured an additional writ of habeas corpus from Justice Fancher, and on Friday it is returnable. Dr. Guernsey of this city, Dr. A. D. Ruggles of Brooklyn, and five other experts will then testify that Mr. Train is perfectly sane.

Mrs. Jane Curran of 11 Hoboken street complained yesterday in the Jefferson Market Police Court that Mrs. Georgina Housies of 415 West Nineteenth street had refused to give up her daughter, Mary Ann Brady, a bright, intelligent child. Mrs. Horsley said that she a bright, intelligent child. Mrs. Horsey said that she found the child destitute in the street on a cold day last November. The child was covered with rags and filth. "I pitted her and took her home and cleaned and dreased her. I found her mother, who readily consented that I should have her. I soon became strangly attached to her, as she is to me. She has been going to achool, and sing is happy and contented with me." The child clung to Mrs. Horsey, and was sent home with her.

tone of prices, however, was downward, and as the shorts yesterday quite generally covered their speculative contracts in Pacific Mail, this leading specialty was heavily pressed for sale, and fell off 2% per cent. to 56%, though rallying % per cent. in the final business. The bulk of the trade was confined to Pacific Mail, Western Union, New York Central, Eric, and Lake Shore, but the chief interest centered in the first named, and its business amounted to about onethird of the entire volume recorded. While the ther stocks above named fluctuated only about % to % per cent., yet an uncertain and unsettled feeling pervaded the dealings, and speculation in the afternoon drifted into positive insignificance. Frie was conspicuous for its strength, and advanced from 64% at the opening to 65% in the late steady throughout the day, and ranged between 86% and 86%, with final sales at 86%. Lake Shore was firm after touching 9824, and closed at 96% though in the morning selling up to 93%. Holders of New York Central showed a disposition to realize, and there was a decline of 16 per cent. in the late trade. Panama opened at 115%, fell off to 112%, but closed 1 per cent. better, and Harlem dropped from 137% to 135. The remainder of the list presented no special attractions. except that Boston, Hartford and Erie fell off to 2%, but rallied afterward to 3%-Ohios and St. 2%, but railied afterward to 3½—Ohios and St. Pauls having been steady on limited transactions. The total number of shares dealt in were 153,196, of which Pacific Mail represented 48,800; Western Union, 19,951; New York Central, 16,300; Eric, 13,700; Lake Shore, II.453; Union Pacific, 6,700; Boston, Harthord and Eric, 7,600; Ohios, 5,000; St. Pauls, 5,000; Harlem, 5,200; C., C. and I. The association is evidently determined that New Jersey shall keep her place in the front of our suburbs. The announcement of the sale of 550 lots in the Twenty-first ward of Brooklyn by Jere-Johnson, Jr., is creating no hitle excitement among Long Island deal-ers, and the demand for maps thus far has been unpre-cedented. Some operators regard it as a bold step to throw so large an amount of property upon the market thus early in the season; while others, considering that it is not high-priced property, but precisely the class of lots sought lafter by mechanics, builders, and small dealers, predict a successful sale. At any price these lots are likely to bring at auction they cannot prove a bad investment.

THE AMENDMENTS TO THE PRISE HALLHOAD BILL.

A remarkable exhibition of the committee's fairness is also shown in the fact that accompanying the amendments they print a sheet containing the reasons for their amendments. These latter are 34 in number, some of them improvements in the verbiology of the bill, others an addition to it. Four of them may be considered particularly vital to the construction of any railroad.

No. 30 prevents the gobbling up of "any franchise, lands, or located route of any bridge, railroad, canal, turnpike, or other corporation chartered for the purpose of facilitating transportation, except for the purpose of crossing said lands or route of said corporation." &c.

No. 31 makes provision that "no railroad shall

But No. 2, which follows, it may as well be here stated is the peculiar colored gentleman, unmasked, to whose uncovering the attention of The SCN readers was last week directed:

Pertinent to this clause is the "reason" given by the committee:

The courts having recently held that a grant of a fran-chise is exclusive by implication against every one but the State which the State may at any moment extinguish, the object of this amendment is that hereafter no such monopoty shall continue, and that hencefor no such monopoty shall continue, and that hencefor no people shall be created, unless the representatives of the people shall declare their design to so bind the citizen by an express and uninitialization of their intention.

A road constructed under the bill as it came from the Senate was like Aladdlu without his lamp, because the Senate omitted to give any express right to collect either toils, fares or freights, and the prospect of dividends was as remote as that of the millenium.

THE AMENDMENTS AGREED TO.

The Clerk read through the whole bill and then presented Worthington's amendments. One by one these were taken up and passed, not even that old Latin gentleman, Nemini, contradicting.
